SYNOPSIS

In a sunny August, Nanni and Michele find their summer heat and tedium shelter on a mount. Here they can escape from their family problems and from a world that don't consider them. Nanni only cares about Michele, his lively sister Lele, a rusted old gun and his platonic love for Jeanne, a franch girl that represent an utopia of a better life for him. Her refusal of loving him will become an excuse for a degeneration of the boy's frustration in a violent and aggressive behaviour.
